

Stewardship & Climate Change

America was founded with one purpose, for We the People to govern ourselves so that personal liberty and property would be protected and preserved by the people and for the people. For this reason, the Constitution outlined a government, which is essential for the protection of those rights, but was to be limited to prevent it from infringing on the rights it was supposed to protect.

Today, those rights are under siege by a federal government that has grown far too large because it has not been held accountable for its actions that infringe upon the rights of the American people and the states in which they reside.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » Elite Land Grab & Climate Change
- » America's "Climate" Crisis
- » Conservation Leasing & How States Can Fight Back
- » Checks & Balances – How Government Should Function

YOUR MISSION: Understand the threat of Conservation Leasing and the nefarious agenda to destroy America that is being pushed by climate change alarmists.

 ATTENTION: The globalist elites are using the federal government to rob the American people of their liberty.

Ep. 7-264 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin Freeman and Ken Ivory. Ken is a friend of the Economic War Room® and an American Patriot.

Ken Ivory is a state representative for District 39 in Utah. He has been fundamentally involved in the success of multiple bills in the state and worked directly with Kevin when he consulted for the Utah Federal Funds Risk Commission.

1. Elite Land Grab & Climate Change

One of America's key founding principles was private property rights. The founding fathers, and those who served in the Revolutionary War, fought for their right to govern themselves, own their own property, and protect it themselves.

Thomas Jefferson famously saw an incredible opportunity in the Louisiana Purchase.

However, Jefferson made sure the land would primarily be available for the American people to purchase.

“Think about Thomas Jefferson, right? He buys 530 million acres for $15 Million greatest land deal in history. And what does he do? He trusts people with land and liberty, and they produce the greatest prosperity the world has ever seen. And we've now come to a point... that we're exactly the opposite... our government is locking up land as fast as they can and then controlling what we can do on the land. And then while they control the land, part of this whole scheme, in putting together a compulsory cap and trade system is they then take the land so that they can sell the environmental services back to you if you've exceeded your greenhouse gas quota. And that's all been done by executive fiat.” –Ken Ivory

Jefferson's genius shined through as the American people settled the land and built the foundations for the incredible growth of US industry that would later make the nation a world power.

Today, the federal government has something else in mind. In Episode 248 it was revealed that over half the land in the western states is owned by the federal government.

Now, the government wants to lock up that land, and purchase more, to lease it out for carbon credits. This strips the people in those states of many opportunities to build wealth and improve our nation's economy.

⚠ Attention: The federal government no longer follows the wisdom of our founding fathers and instead seeks to control our land.

2. America's "Climate" Crisis

This elite land grab comes in the wake of the great "Climate Crisis" that the globalist elites proselytize every time they get off their private jets.

Under the Biden administration, the real catastrophe is being revealed. Under the threat of climate change, a nefarious agenda has been at work to destroy the America we know and love.

"You have to set sort of guide rails down now. So, between the years 2021 and 2030, it's irreversible the path we've set ourselves on. And one of which is doing away with any subsidies for fossil fuels, number one. Number two, holding them liable for what they have done, particularly in those cases where your underserved neighborhoods and- you know the deal. Okay. And by the way, when they don't or when they're deliberate- put them in jail, that's what I- I'm not joking about this. I'm not joking about this." –Joe Biden

The Biden administration not only threatens to destroy the Oil and Coal industries that produce the majority of the energy on our nation's grid but also threatens to imprison those who challenge this agenda.

Sadly, this is only the beginning. As the Biden administration marionette obeys its master's strings, we can expect that each action will be structured to fracture liberty and destroy the security of the American people.

“[Biden’s] first executive order was 14008, tackling climate crisis at home and abroad. And right in that executive order, says we’re going to lock up 30% of all land and water in the United States, completely decarbonize all of the energy sector in the United States. So energy and transportation sector. And then you have the whole of government approach. So in the executive order, every single federal agency, I mean, Department of Education, NOAA, the Postal Service, IRS, they all have to have their 30 by 30 decarbonization and environmental justice plan. And yeah, they’re ticking these all off down the line. So the couple of them that they haven’t gotten to yet is make polluters pay and declare the climate emergency. So you’re going to hear more and more drumbeat about declaring the climate emergency and making polluters pay.”

–Ken Ivory

As the globalist elites seek to lock up land, there is only one purpose. To limit its use. They believe that if land cannot be used to generate wealth for the people, it can only be used to strip it from them.

These large swaths of land will be managed using taxpayer money so they can charge citizens and businesses for over-consuming carbon or overproducing emissions as per government regulation.

This will strip taxpayers of their money through taxes, personal carbon credit fines, and an increase in the cost of goods as corporations are forced to spend money on carbon credits.

Regardless of how this process works, those who lose out will be the American people as elites find a way to profit from the abuse.

Attention: The fake climate crisis is an excuse for the furthering of a nefarious agenda to destroy the liberty and security of the American people.

3. Conservation Leasing & How States Can Fight Back

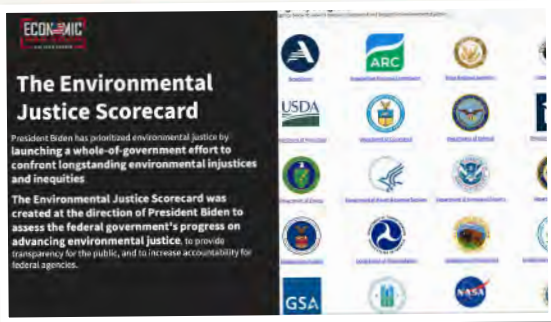

As the federal government seeks to lock up more land for conservation leasing, the threat is already too real in many states where the federal government already owns most of the land.

Ken Ivory has been fighting for Utah and the other western states to claim those federal lands for the states so they can be better managed, and the people can benefit from them more efficiently.

“They had no authority to hold them. But the longer we allow them to hang onto it, they’re going to come up with more and more dangerous ideas. And so now the land that was supposed to be multiple use, sustained yield, right, timber and ranching and harvesting, and even recreation, they’ve now shut off all the land and they’re leasing that same land... they call it conservation leasing. So, it was like the solemn promise this land is going to be just as good as if you had it under your control. In this state, multiple use sustained yield was an act that goes back into the 60s, but now they lease it to their NGO pals. They even have the New York Stock Exchange from September of 2021, allowed them to do IPOs for something called a natural asset company. So, you take the environmental asset, you tie it up, you do the IPO, and then you sell the environmental services.” –Ken Ivory

Instead of allowing states to manage the land as they see fit, the federal government sends their “experts” for occasional visits. This has left much of the land unprotected from wildfires and other preventable natural disasters.

The locally managed lands are far more fruitful, provide labor opportunities for the locals, and see fewer disasters. The conservation of America’s wildlife is essential, but the federal government is not the right steward of this land.

Ken has been helping Utah fight back against the federal government to claim those lands, but more importantly, he has led the charge to fight for Utah’s right to define police power. According to the Legal Information Institute at Cornell University, Police Power is defined as “the fundamental ability of a government to enact laws to coerce its citizenry for the public good.”

This power is granted primarily to the states and the people under the Tenth Amendment.

This battle commenced when the EPA, an organization not defined in the Constitution, ordered the state of Utah to shut off all coal-fired power by 2026.

“It’s about the order. It’s not about whether it’ll work or not. And at the state level, we have a duty to make sure that we provide affordable, reliable power. It’s called the police power. It doesn’t mean actually just the police with the guns and badges. It means protecting health, safety, welfare, and morals. Supreme Court has said repeatedly the police powers are possessed by the states, not the federal government. So in the bill that I passed this year- was House Bill 405... we said, look, the police power is possessed by the states. Energy is central, fundamental to the police power. And so, thank you for your suggestion, But we’re not shutting off the power in the state of Utah... it’s very critical that people get to their state representatives, their state leaders, and give them the support that they need.” –Ken Ivory

The passing of this bill provides Utah with protection from the “regulations” of the EPA as they will be able to take them up to the Supreme Court where precedent is in favor of state power.

Bills like this one can be passed in every state to preserve state rights and protect the American people from an overgrown federal government.

Attention: States can fight back against this conservation leasing plot and preserve the state powers afforded to them in the Constitution.

4. Checks & Balances – How Government Should Function

States having more power over the daily lives of their citizens than the federal government is a key check and balance in the Constitution, however, it is not the most important.

Before any form of government is involved in a situation, people must assess the situation to determine if the government is even allowed to participate.

“Would you like to memorize the Constitution? ... If government... Which government? That’s the whole constitution. If government... Did, we, the people, delegate that matter to any government? If not, stop right there. If we did, then which one did we delegate it to? A government far away, less accountable, less transparent, which is a limited jurisdiction government. The Supreme Court has made that clear. Or did we keep that power close to home where we can go to the Capitol, we can talk to our representatives? Our voice can matter directly on the things that affect our life, liberty, and property. If government... Which government? That’s the entire Constitution right there.” –Ken Ivory

The responsibility of the American people is to govern themselves on any matters that were not afforded to the federal or state governments. The more local a governing body is, the more accountable that governing body is to the people it is supposed to serve.

The brilliance of the American system, designed by men who sought wisdom from God, is that those in elected offices were to be servants of the people.

Those who hold offices of leadership are supposed to make sacrifices for the needs of the people they serve.

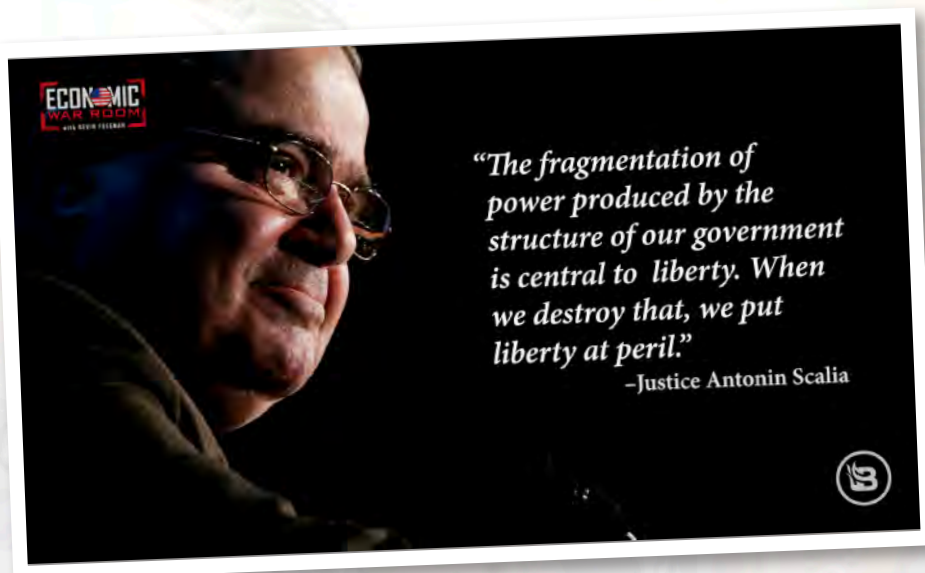

“The employee is the representative. They work for the people. And yet when I walk into state reps, offices, or congressman’s offices, I too often heard, ‘We’re your rulers and your leaders. How may I bless you or help you in my sovereign capacity?’... We have a misunderstanding of the role. I wrote a book, According to Plan, and in it, I used the term ‘pigs.’ The Apostle Paul, quoting Old Testament scripture, said ‘You should not speak ill of a ruler of your people.’ I struggled with that until I realized that, no, our representatives are servants. They’re not rulers.”—Kevin Freeman

This is the ultimate check and balance. If an American politician is in office and acts like they are a ruler, they are not aligned with the vision of the founding fathers. Those holding political offices should be doing so as a public service, not for personal gain.

Attention: It is essential that the American people hold elected officials accountable to serve the people they represent. If not, the primary check and balance of the Constitution is for naught.
