

The Utah Gold Rush

Across the United States, inflation and federal debt threaten the financial stability of families and states alike, prompting innovative responses from local leaders. Utah has taken a bold step toward economic stability with legislation to incorporate gold and silver as a practical currency. Led by Representative Ken Ivory and Treasurer Marlo Oaks, Utah's approach not only preserves the purchasing power of its citizens but also challenges the federal monopoly of monetary policies. This movement could redefine how money is viewed and utilized across the United States.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » The Rise of Constitutional Currency in Utah
- » Economic Protection: Gold and Silver as a Hedge Against Inflation
- » Growing Support and Multi-State Collaboration for Financial Independence

YOUR MISSION: discover how Utah's innovative use of gold and silver could protect financial security and inspire a broader movement for economic resilience across the U.S.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- » Utah's efforts could redefine money, offering you a stable alternative to the dollar and influencing financial policies in your state.
- » With inflation eroding your savings, gold could safeguard your wealth, and Utah's fight against restrictive taxes might make it a viable option for you.
- » Understanding this growing movement empowers you to advocate for similar protections locally, amplifying your financial choices through collective state action.

Ep. 9-336 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin Freeman, Marlo Oaks, and Ken Ivory. Marlo and Ken are friends of the Economic War Room® and American Patriots.

Marlo Oaks is a husband, father, and the current Utah State Treasurer. Marlo spent 17 years managing institutional portfolios at Farmers Insurance ($24 billion) and then at Intermountain Healthcare ($7.5 billion) where he also oversaw the Treasury function. He completed a Bachelor of Arts in Economics (BYU), an MBA (UCLA Anderson), and holds the CFA and CAIA investment designations.

Ken Ivory is a state representative for District 39 in Utah. He has been fundamentally involved in the success of multiple bills in the state and worked directly with Kevin when he consulted for the Utah Federal Funds Risk Commission.

1. The Rise of Constitutional Currency in Utah

Utah is leading the charge in reintroducing gold and silver as legal tender, backed by legislative efforts like HB 348 and HB 306. These laws enable state vendors to receive payments in gold and authorize the state to hold part of its rainy-day fund in precious metals.

This builds on earlier efforts to establish gold and silver as legal tender, positioning Utah as a challenger to federal monetary control.

Spearheaded by Representative Ken Ivory and Treasurer Marlo Oaks, this initiative aims to make precious metals accessible for everyday use, offering a practical alternative to the dollar.

“It simply allows a state vendor or service provider to choose to receive payment in gold from the state instead of dollars. And for the state, all it means is setting up another account, like a bank account.” –Ken Ivory

The significance lies in its potential to set a precedent. By integrating gold into state transactions and reserves, Utah is not only reviving a constitutional principle—Article 1, Section 10 of the U.S. Constitution—but also testing a model that could spread to other states.

This isn't just a local experiment; it's a signal of shifting financial paradigms that could affect national policy, interstate commerce, and federal power.

Attention: Utah's legislative push is making gold and silver viable money again, challenging federal dominance and offering a new financial path.

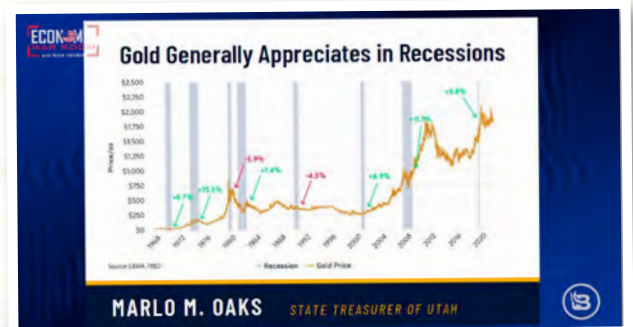

2. Economic Protection: Gold and Silver as a Hedge Against Inflation

Throughout history, gold has been a consistent store of value, protecting investors from inflation.

In our current economic climate, central banks and sovereign wealth funds are increasing their gold reserves to prepare for changing economic conditions.

The Utah Treasury decided to allocate a portion of its rainy-day fund to gold to protect its citizens with a stable and valuable asset in uncertain economic times.

"A state-utilized, gold-based transactional platform could offer citizens an alternative payment system, helping to safeguard their purchasing power against the erosion caused by inflation more effectively than reliance on the dollar alone. For a century and a half, gold was money in the United States." —Marlo Oaks

While gold offers stability, outdated tax policies limit its practicality.

Utah's advocacy for tax reform could unlock its potential, making it a tool for individuals and states to protect wealth.

As inflation continues to outpace wage growth, this approach resonates with anyone seeking financial security and a way to preserve their hard-earned purchasing power.

By allowing citizens to store and transact with gold, Utah can ensure that its residents have an option to protect their wealth against the erosion of the dollar's value.

Attention: Historically, gold has served as a hedge against inflation, preserving its purchasing power even in the most unstable economies.

1. Growing Support and Multi-State Collaboration for Financial Independence

Utah's gold-based monetary initiative has garnered widespread grassroots support, with community leaders, advocacy groups, and bipartisan legislators backing the effort.

Framed as an assertion of state sovereignty, this movement allows Utah to take charge of its economic destiny.

Beyond Utah, states like Texas, Oklahoma, and Florida are watching closely, with treasurers considering a coalition to push gold-friendly policies and challenge federal taxation. This collaborative potential amplifies the initiative's reach and impact.

"Additionally, other states—such as Texas, Oklahoma, and Florida (among many others)—are considering similar measures, and a coalition of state treasurers may work together to advance gold-friendly policies and challenge federal taxation... A multi-state effort could pressure the federal government to rethink money and taxation, amplifying the impact on national economic policy." —Kevin Freeman

The grassroots enthusiasm reflects a broader desire for financial autonomy, while multi-state interest suggests a tipping point. The American people are looking for a solution that restores their wealth, and they believe they have found it.

If multiple states adopt similar measures, they could significantly influence national monetary policy, providing Americans with greater financial autonomy and protection against federal economic mismanagement.

Attention: Utah's citizen-driven push and potential state alliances are building a movement for financial independence that could reshape national policy.
